Building one's own theological foundation is a life time task. But it is most rewarding, and most importantly, it strengthens your faith and your ministry.

New books are not always better than old books. Spiritual giants like John Stott and J.I. Packer advise the reader to drink from the foundations of ripe, mature theology which has been handed down through the centuries. Let the beginner take heed!

You can begin at a number of points, since a theological system is a comprehensive whole made up of many parts. You can start with a serious study of each book of the Bible, or by studying systematic theology. You may begin by using reference works (e.g. theological dictionaries) to supplement your preparation for Sunday School classes and Bible studies, or you may choose to follow a Bible survey or a Bible textbook.

STUDY BIBLES

Christians need to make the most out of their personal devotions. Building a theological foundation can begin here!

A solid tool is the "New Geneva Study Bible" (Nashville, TN: Thomas Nelson /Foundation for Reformation, 1995, $26.99 from Ligonier Ministries, P.O. Box 547500 Orlando FL 32854, 407 333 4244 or 800 435 4343, Fax 407 333 4233). The notes and the special articles all seek to build a solid theological foundation from the historic, 16th century Reformational perspective. If we complement this with the "Life Application Bible" (Tyndale and Zondervan, 1988), we will have two tools to build solid, practical Bible studies and sermons.

For Chinese readers, the "NIV Study Bible" published by Christian Renewal Ministries ("Shengjing xin guo ji ban yan du ben", or "The CRM Study Bible", Milltown, NJ Christian Renewal Ministries 1996) is the most complete study Bible. However one should not ignore the study Bible edited by China Graduate School of Theology's faculty "Sheng jing: chuan zhu zhu xi ben [The Bible: CGST Study Edition]" (Hong Kong: Christian Communications Ltd., 1987). The bottom half of every page is shaded in gray, and packed with thought-provoking questions (no answers, just questions).

The ones I have listed are aimed at building one's theological foundations. There are other study Bibles for devotional use.

BIBLE STUDY AIDS

To help you along in your Bible study, I would recommend works which stimulate your thinking. The best tool is "Search the Scriptures" (London: inter Varsity Press, 1949), which has been translated into Chinese as "Yan Jing Ri Ke" (Hong Kong Christian Communications Ltd., 1972, 1980, 1982, 3 volumes). Two questions are given for every passage from Genesis to Revelation. No answers, just questions! This is probably the most difficult book in its category, but well worth your diligent effort in digging into the Word of God. When you have adequately and correctly answered the two questions for every passage, you almost have a sermon/Bible study lesson ready!

Another book in the same category is This "Morning With God" (IVP), and the Chinese translation is "Qing Chen Jing Si Zhu Hua" (Hong Kong Seed Press, 1976-1981; 4 volumes). There are a greater number of questions for each passage, and they are easier to answer. I would use this book in conjunction with "Search the Scriptures".

HOW TO INTERPRET THE BIBLE

For many decades, T. Norton Sterrett's "How to Understand your Bible" (Downers Grove, IL: Inter Varsity Press, 1974) was a standard evangelical text, for Sunday School, Bible studies and Bible college classes. The Chinese translation is: . An older text on hermeneutics (the science of interpreting the Bible) is Louis Berkhof's "Principles of Biblical interpretation" (Grand Rapids, MI Eerdmans). More recent books on interpretation have been written by R.C. Sproul and John Stott. Shorter works in Chinese include A. Stibbs "Understanding God's Word" (Milltown, NJ Christian Renewal Ministries, 1975).

With the advent of neo-evangelicalism, scholars are shying away from emphasizing the doctrinal unity of Scripture, leaning toward highlighting the historical progression and the variety of literary genres reflected in the various books of the Bible. This newer approach can be seen in Gordon Fee, "How to Study the Bible for All its Worth", a popular guide to the different genres of literature in the Bible.

Dan Doriani's "Getting the Message" (Phillipsburg, NJ: Presbyterian and Reformed, 1996) is a fresh, dynamic approach to Bible interpretation which is faithful to the inspiration and authority of Scripture, and in dialogue with contemporary theories of interpretation. Doriani also balances concerns of the heart with those of the mind.

BIBLE DICTIONARIES

The one single volume which I think a Christian should purchase to supplement his/her Bible is "The New Bible Dictionary" (Grand Rapids, MI Eerdmans, originally published by Inter Varsity Press, 1962), Chinese translation "Sheng Jing Xin Ci Dian" (2 volumes, Hong Kong Tien Dao, 1993, 1997). When you are preparing for a Bible study lesson/sermon, look up the most significant (heavy) doctrinal words in the dictionary, e.g. sacrifice, temple, church, love, righteousness, faith, Justification, inspiration, God, etc. Also, read one article a day during a spare moment (before you go to bed!)! it will really enrich your understanding of what God's Word teaches.

The Chinese version, based on the 1982 2nd edition, is expensive, but well worth the cost. Note there are at least three English versions:

the original "New Bible Dictionary" (the cover may look different because of different printings); the "Tyndale Illustrated Bible Dictionary" (3 volumes), and "the New Bible Dictionary: Third Edition". I prefer the first: it is the original, it is the cheapest, and since it is older, it is not as much affected by contemporary theories of biblical criticism. The Tyndale edition is in 3 volumes, and has many illustrations in color. The text is the same as the older version, only the illustrations are new, and the price is rather high.

BIBLE COMMENTARIES

Commentaries are very useful in giving you balance, an overall view, and things you may overlook in preparing sermons. My favorite New Testament commentary series is William Hendriksen, "The New Testament Commentary" (Grand Rapids, MI Baker), it was completed after Hendriksen's death by Dr. Simon Kistemaker of Reformed Theological Seminary. Hendriksen - Kistemaker is expository and homiletical, that is, the commentary reads like a sermon. There are many helpful outlines. and I Corinthians, in particular, was written by Kistemaker who responded intelligently to contemporary debates, e.g. the place of women in the ministry of the church.

The single one-volume Bible commentary most available and most helpful is "The New Bible Commentary: Revised" (Eerdmans, 1970, Chinese translation was based on original version: "The New Commentary", Inter Varsity, 1953, in Chinese "Sheng Jing Min Shi", Hong Kong Christian Witness Press, 1958). It is compact, and does not intend to answer every theological question. But it is a helpful overview of the content of the passage.

Ripe, mature commentaries on the various books of the Bible have been written by Puritans and other church leaders since the 17th century. They have been collected in "The Geneva Commentaries", published by Banner of Truth Trust.

Campus Evangelical Fellowship in Taiwan has been translating the "Tyndale Old Testament Commentaries" and the "Tyndale New Testament Commentaries" series (English original published by Inter Varsity Press). They are very helpful. More recently written commentaries contain evangelical scholar's dialogue with, and use of, contemporary theories of Bible interpretation.

"The Anchor Bible" and other commentary series published by Word and Zondervan put the reader in touch with contemporary debates in Bible background and interpretation.

TOPICAL ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE

"The Topical Analysis of the Bible" (Grand Rapids, MI: Baker Books, 1991) was edited by Walter Elwell at Wheaton College. It has been translated into Chinese and published by Logos Publishers in 1996 as "Zhu Ti Hui Shi Sheng Jing" (Hong Kong Logos Publishers, Unit 1011, Fo Tan industrial Centre, 26 Au Pui Wan Street, Fo Tan, Shatin, Hong Kong, fax 852 2687 0281, 1997). This is an arrangement of Bible verses according to an order in systematic theology. All the verses are quoted in full.

THEOLOGICAL DICTIONARIES

"The New Dictionary of Theology", edited by Sinclair Ferguson, David F. Wright and J.I. Packer (Downers Grove, IL: Inter Varsity, 1988) is a standard volume for evangelicals. It stands in the center of the evangelical movement. The Chinese equivalent, "Dang Dai Shen Xue Ci Dian" (2 volumes, edited by Arnold Yeung -- Yang Mu Gu), leans more toward the center of the contemporary academic scene. For example, while Yeung has added new material to the original English text, he does not always give equal treatment to more conservative views (e.g. his work in the article on "Apologetics"). Yeung's work can be supplemented by Charles Chao's "A Dictionary of Theological Terms" ("Shen xue ming ci ci dian", Reformation Translation Fellowship, 3rd edition, 1998). Chao is Reformed, and gives a more conservative interpretation of key terms. Another helpful work is Walter Elwell's "Evangelical Dictionary of Theology" (Grand Rapids, MI Baker Books, 1984). Elwell has been teaching theology at Wheaton College for many years.

Dr. Colin Brown of Fuller Theological Seminary was editor of "The New International Dictionary of New Testament Theology" (Grand Rapids, MI Zondervan, 1975, 4 volumes, including index), the standard with which has taken into account contemporary critical theories. A broader academic volume consulted by students of religion and theology is Gerhard Kittel, ed. (translated by Geoffrey W. Bromiley), "Theological Dictionary of the Theology of New Testament" (Grand Rapids, MI Eerdmans, 1964-74, 10 volumes). Fortunately, this has been abridged into one volume, nicknamed the "Little Kittel": "Theological Dictionary of the New Testament: Abridged in One Volume" (Grand Rapids, MI Eerdmans, 1985). Both give definitions of the word in Greek, along with background in Hebrew and Old Testament usage as well as secular Greek usage.

BIBLE SURVEYS

For the Old Testament, two one-volume textbooks are conservative and highly readable: Jack Scott, "God's Plan Unfolded" (Wheaton, IL Tyndale House, 1976), and Leon Wood, "A Survey of Israel's History" (Grand Rapids, MI Zondervan, 1970). Scott's is a clearly covenantal perspective.

The Christian Education and Publications Committee (Presbyterian Church in America) has published a very substantial series entitled "Adult Biblical Education Series" (Committee on Christian Education and Publications, 1852 Century Place, Suite 101, Atlanta, GA 30345, 1980). There is one volume introducing the Old Testament, one volume introducing the New Testament, and numerous volumes treating every part of the Bible. Lessons are written out in full, for the benefit of the Sunday School teacher or Bible study leader. Lessons may be too long to be covered in 1 hour, I suggest using one of Scott's lessons for two sessions. Sometimes Scott will include other materials, e.g. sketches of Church History. Available from the Christian Education and Publications bookstore in Atlanta, Georgia.

BIBLE INTRODUCTION (BACKGROUND)

Two standard, older evangelical introductions to the background of the Bible were written by Gleason Archer ("A Survey of Old Testament Introduction", Chicago, IL Moody Press, 1964) and Merrill Tenney ("New Testament Survey", Grand Rapids, MI: Eerdmans, 1961). Students at Moody and Trinity have nicknamed Archer's book "The Yellow Bible," since Dr. Archer used to examine the students on their memory of the content in it! Tenney is available in Chinese: "Min yue Zong Lan" (Hong Kong China Alliance Press, 1976).

A more scholarly approach is "New Testament Introduction" by Donald Guthrie of London Bible College (IVP). Guthrie gives an overview of the many theories on a debate, and then seeks to offer reasonable support for the conservative view.

Other evangelical scholars who have stood firm in the midst of the academic world include F. F. Bruce (author of dozens of books) and Dr. Metzger of Princeton Seminary (expert on New Testament textual criticism).

DOCTRINE: CREEDS, CATECHISMS, STUDY GUIDES

To build one's theological foundation from the beginning, or to teach young people, I suggest two catechisms: "The Shorter Catechism with Scripture Proofs" (Banner of Truth Trust, 3 Murrayfield Road, Edinburgh EH12 6EL, Scotland, or P O. Box 621, Carlisle, PA 17103, USA, US $1.00) and "The First Catechism" (Great Commission Publications, 3640 Windsor Park Drive, Suite 100, Suwanee, GA 30024-1800, 1996, 95cents). Both can be ordered from the CEP bookstore.

The Shorter Catechism was written during the Westminster Assembly (1647) to be used by churches to teach their young people Bible doctrine. Since then, it has become the best exposition of Protestant doctrines in history! Dr. J. I. Packer has, on many occasions, required his theology class to memorize all the 100+ answers! For the contemporary adult, we may need a study guide to accompany it: G. I. Williamson, "The Shorter Catechism for Study Classes" (Phillipsburg, NJ Presbyterian and Reformed Publishing, 1970, 2 volumes), available from CEP bookstore. Reformation Translation Fellowship has translated this as "Ji Du Jiao Yao Dao Chu Jie [First Steps in Christian Doctrine]" (Taipei Reformation Translation Fellowship, 1979), useful for training classes for elders, deacons and Sunday School teachers. I would use it in high school and college Sunday School classes.

The more complete exposition of Reformational doctrine is "The Westminster Confession of Faith", "Larger and Shorter Catechisms" (Atlanta, GA Presbyterian Church in America, 3rd edition, 1990, available from CEP bookstore). Get the version with scripture texts! I particularly appreciate the "Confession"'s definition of the authority of the Bible (Chapter 1); its explanation of assurance of salvation (chapter 19); and the "Larger Catechism"'s explanation of the use of God's law. Both the Larger and the Shorter Catechism devotes plenty of space to explaining the Ten Commandments and the Lord's Prayer. G. I. Williamson has written "The Westminster Confession of Faith for Study Classes" (Phillipsburg, NJ Presbyterian and Reformed, 1964) as a study guide. The Confession and the Shorter (not the Larger) Catechism has been collected in Reformation Translation Fellowship's creeds volume: "Li Dai Jiao Hui Xin Tiao Jing Xuan [Ecumenical Creeds and Reformed Confessions and Catechisms]" (Taipei Reformation Translation Fellowship, 1993). Another standard Chinese collection of creeds is: "Li dai ji du jiao xin tiao [Confessions, Catechisms and Church Councils]" (Hong Kong Chinese Christian Council, 1957).

The Presbyterian Church (USA) has compiled a volume of creeds known as "The Book of Confessions" (Office of the General Assembly, Presbyterian Church (USA), 100 Witherspoon Street, Louisville, KY 40202-1396, 800-524-2612 Or 502-569-5000 ext. 2503, 1996, $4.00). Fuller Seminary's bookstore should carry it regularly. It contains most of the Reformed creeds, along with 20th century statements which may contain a Neo-Orthodox / Barthian slant. It is an inexpensive, helpful reference work.

TEXTBOOKS ON SYSTEMATIC THEOLOGY

For many years, the standard Reformed textbook is Louis Berkhof, "Systematic Theology" (Carlisle, PA Banner of Truth, 1939, reprinted in numerous editions). Dr. Berkhof taught systematic theology for many years at Calvin Seminary, and can be considered a 20th century "heir" to Charles Hodge (see below). A companion volume is his "A History of Christian Doctrines" (which has been translated: "Ji du jiao jiao yi shi", Taipei Reformation Translation Fellowship, 1984). Solid, comprehensive, succinct. Both should be used together.

Berkhof has written a shorter version, "A Manual of Christian Doctrine", which has been translated by Rev. Charles Chao of the Reformation Translation Fellowship, entitled "Ji Du Jiao Jiao Yi Gai Lun" (Taipei Reformation Translation Fellowship, 1974). A still shorter version is "A Summary of Christian Doctrine" (Grand Rapids, MI Eerdmans 1938, reprinted numerous times), published by Tien Dao Publishers in Hong Kong as "Ji Du Jiao Jiao Yi Gai Yao" (Hong Kong Tien Dao Publishing House, 1978, 1983, 1986). A must buy!

Two standard works on systematic theology are probably too long for the beginner, but a worthwhile investment for future study: John Calvin's "Institutes of the Christian Religion" (tr. Ford Lewis Battles, Philadelphia Westminster Press, 1960, 2 volumes), and Charles Hodge, "Systematic Theology" (Grand Rapids, MI William B. Eerdmans, many editions, 3 volumes, there is a one-volume abridged edition). Calvin's work is unparalleled, you can buy a Chinese excerpted version in the "Ji Du Jiao Li Dai Mina Zhu Ji Cheng" (Christian Classics Library) series, published by Chinese Christian Literature Council, Hong Kong. The Chinese title is "Ji Du Jiao Yao Yi" (volumes 5-6 of the series). Hodge was systematic theology professor at Princeton Seminary in the 19th century, although many people would no longer use his "arguments from experience," and many cannot read the Latin sections of the 3 volume text, Hodge remains a tower of strength defending the orthodox, Reformed, evangelical positions. 21st century readers will find the one-volume abridged version much easier to use!

For the average, beginning student (seminarian, layperson or Sunday School teacher), two easier one-volume texts are James M. Boice, "Foundations of Christian Faith" (Downers Grove, IL Inter Varsity Press, 1986, formerly 4 volumes), and Wayne Grudem, "Systematic Theology" (Grand Rapids, MI Zondervan, 1994). Boice is pastor at Tenth Presbyterian Church, and a staunch defender and able expositor of Bible doctrines. He follows the same outline as Calvin's Institutes. Grudem is Reformed, and sympathetic to certain themes in the contemporary charismatic movement. Grudem adds a hymn at the end of every chapter, and his sectional headings are framed in questions, highly readable!

CHURCH HISTORY

We will not review the standard texts in church history. We will only introduce works which help build one's theological foundation.

For the beginner (Sunday School student), "The Church in History" by B. K. Kuiper (CSI Publications, 1951 ; Grand Rapids, Mt Eerdmans, reprinted 1998) is highly readable, and contains many, many pictures and charts. It has been translated by Mrs. Morley (Sophie Lin) Lee, under the title "Li Shi Di Gui Ji"(Taipei Campus Evangelical Fellowship, 1986). The book was originally written for senior high students in Christian high schools. Well illustrated with pictures, charts and maps, it is most helpful for any adult beginner in church history.

A highly readable English textitbook is Bruce Shelley's "Church History in Plain language" (Dallas, TX:Word, 1982). It is much longer than Kuiper, and is written from a generally evangelical (sometimes Baptist) point of view. Shelley chooses important themes in church history, and always begins a chapter with an anecdote.

For Reformation history, standard works include Roland Bainton, "The Protestant Reformation in the 16th Century", (Boston, MA Beacon Press, 1952), and his biography of Martin Luther: "Here I Stand" (available in Chinese, entitled "Zhe shi wo di fi chang"). For the Reformed movement, try John T. McNeill, "The History and Charecter of Calvinism" (New York Ortord University Press, 1954), and Douglas F. Kelly, "The Emergence of Liberty in the Modem World: The Influence of Calvin on Five Govemments from the 16th through 18th Centuries" (Phillipsburg, NJ Presbyterian and Reformed, 1982).

APOLOGETICS

A beginner's text for Sunday School classes is Richard Pratt, "Every Thought Captive" (Phillipsburg, NJ Presbyterian and Reformed).

Francis Schaeffer's "Escape from Reason" (Downers Grove, IL Inter Varsity Press, 1968) and "How Should We Then Live?" (Old Tappan, NJ Revell, 1976) are classic critiques of humanistic culture in western history from a biblical perspective. Both have been translated into Chinese, the latter is more readable: "Qian iu ke jian" (Hong Kong China Alliance Press, 19-).

MODERN THOUGHT AND MODERN THEOLOGY

A most succinct summary and critique of modern schools of theology (both liberal and conservative) is found in Harvie M. Conn, "Contemporary World Theology: A Layman's Guidebook" (Presbyterian and Reformed, 1973). The Chinese translation is entitled "Xian dai shen xue lun ping", translated by Rey. Charles Chao and Rev. Watson Soong (Taipei Reformation Translation Fellowship, 1973).

AUDIOTAPES AND VIDEOTAPES

The reader may consider securing audio and videotapes of lectures on theology, biblical doctrine and apologetics from Regent College Bookstore and Ligonier Ministries. The latter is the teaching ministry of R. C. Sproul, and has a very elaborate catalog, free upon request. The reader may consider subscribing to Ligonier's monthly devotional magazine, "Tabletalk".

Other sources of theology tapes include Westminster Media/Westminster Theological Seminary bookstore, and the extension studies offices of Reformed Theological Seminary and Covenant Theological Seminary. You may or may not need to enroll in extension/distance learning courses, in order to purchase the tapes.
